ASGO Webinar Series #58

Learning Hub for Young Gynecologic Oncologists!

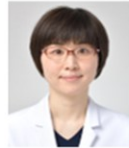

The ASGO Education Committee is excited to introduce a newly formed initiative – the Asian Society of Young Gynecologic Oncologists (ASYGO) Working Group. This working group, established under the ASGO Education Committee, aims to address the unmet educational needs of young gynecologic oncologists across Asia by developing targeted content that directly supports their clinical and academic growth.

With the main theme "What Young Gynecologic Oncologists Should Know," the ASYGO Working Group focuses on bridging educational gaps, fostering mentorship, and enhancing collaboration not only among young gynecologic oncologists in Asia but also on a global scale. ASYGO working group provides practical knowledge, research skills, and networking opportunities essential for early-career gynecologic oncologists to successfully navigate their professional journey.

We are honored to introduce the four Co-Chairs leading the ASYGO Working Group:

Shoko Kitazawa
Keio University
Japan

Miseon Kim Nakazawa
Sapporo Medical University
Japan

Kamonrat Monthatip
Chiang Mai University
Thailand

Jun-Hyeong Seo
Samsung Medical Center,
South Korea

We sincerely appreciate their efforts in establishing this initiative. Through regular webinars and in-person session at the ASGO conference, the ASYGO Working Group will actively engage in educational activities to support young gynecologic oncologists.

As the first official activity, ASYGO working group will be hosting a webinar on "The Role and Application of Sentinel Lymph Node Biopsy in Gynecologic Oncology."

The Role and Application of Sentinel Lymph Node Biopsy (SLNB) in Gynecologic Oncology

First In-Person ASGO Session
: Presented at ASGO 2025

Are You Struggling with MIS?

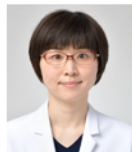

Want to know How to Overcome the Learning Curve of MIS?

You're Not Alone. Let's Discuss Together!

The ASGO Working Group is a growing initiative launched to deliver tailored educational content for young gynecologic oncologists across Asia. Through regular webinars and in-person sessions, ASGO aims to address the real-world challenges and unmet learning needs of early-career young doctors.

Following the success of our recent webinar on Sentinel Lymph Node Biopsy — which drew significant attention from across the region [Click here to watch the webinar] — ASGO is now proud to announce its first in-person session, taking place at ASGO 2025 in Tokyo.

Among the many educational gaps identified by young gynecologic oncologists, Minimally Invasive Surgery (MIS) consistently ranks as one of the most urgent areas in need of focused training and discussion. This upcoming session brings together ASGO members from across Asia to share current practices, challenges, and country-specific perspectives on MIS training.

First in-person session: Tokyo, July 2025

Discussion on the Current Status of MIS for Gynecologic Oncology in Five Asian Countries

Why Now? The Need for ASYGO

Training environments are diverse;
opportunities remain uneven.

Rising demand for regional collaboration and structured mentorship.

Young voices are essential for research,
education, and advocacy.

How ASYGO Works: Four Pillars

Education — webinars, journal clubs, case discussions

Mentorship — Asia-wide & international mentor-mentee matching

Research — multicenter projects, young-led surveys & registries

Community & Advocacy — channel young voices to ASGO;
collaborate with European young groups

What's Next?

Joint webinars with young groups from other regions

---

Regular journal clubs & case-based discussions (online)

---

Multicenter studies (building on today's Asia-wide survey)

---

Annual ASYGO Session at the ASGO Congress (to be institutionalized)

---

Open call: country reps, volunteers, and mentors
